John Engman's tragic death is our gain, as this posthumous collection brings together 40+ previously uncollected poems by this legend of Hennepin Avenue in Minneapolis: a tender, unassuming genius of comic wit and tragic irony. Many of Engman's classic poems, previously collected in "keeping still, mountain" are missing here, but there are a plethora of surprises, and literally hundreds of magic moments. My favorite poem is "Lemon Sun." Engman is a must poet for young contemporary poets seeking an alternative voice to workshop cynicism and writing program predictability. John comes at you from an infinite number of directions. Not all of these angles work, but when one does, it is unforgettable.

What an amazing collection. So tragic that we'll never see any more from Engman. His voice is unique, witty, modest and so congenial. And his "serious" stuff is powerful too. He's like a younger, hipper Billy Collins. English teachers: If you want "approachable" poetry to introduce students to the art form, much of Engman's is perfect!

Great poems about the drudgery of day to day life. Highly recommended to folks who like tongue in cheek humor.

It came very well packed. It looks like a new copy. This is one of my favorite books of poems. This copy will be a gift.
