Customer Reviews

I tried to like this book but I couldn't. This book fell short in so many ways. I cannot believe all of the good reviews this book got. If this was this author's best attempt, I applaud it, but she needs to go back to the drawing board. I didn't like Zoey. Her character was so flawed and it had nothing to do with the molestation she experienced at 15, even though that was supposed to be the reason for her being so messed up, I did not buy it. This story was so rushed. The way she and Asher fell in love was so unbelievable. I hate the fact that I even had to rate this book before I could write a review. Now let's talk about the relationship she had with her stepfather. The author talks about how she was groomed by him, how she ultimately became his victim, how he stole her innocence, how she ultimately fell in love with him, began to resent her mother bc she viewed him as her man, and how she did it all because she believed her mother would lose the lifestyle she had become accustomed to if she told her mother about what was going on. I just didnt buy that. Maybe it was because her mother had already proven she would protect. Had already shown she loved her child. Maybe it was Zoey's age. Had she been younger, I could have bought what the author was selling, but Zoey was 15, with a protective mother. How could she believe she couldn't go to her mom? Then we have little snippets about how the mother found out and disowned the daughter. There were 2 victims in this story. Yet, Zoey's mother goes from being a loving mom who would kill for her child to being a heartless witch who disowned her child. There was no talk of the mothers pain, no discussion on how she had to deal with her daughter being a victim, to becoming her stepfather willing lover and manipulating the situation to get what she wanted.
