Customer Reviews

I've had the pleasure of reading some of Rachel Kramer Bussel's other collections (Dirty Girls, Yes, Sir) and find her to be not only a talented writer in her own right, but also a gifted editor. On a visit to see a friend, I was handed Anything for You as potential bedtime reading. Reading, indeed--but not much sleeping! I loved the premise of the book--that the characters in the stories are, for the most part, not beginners in the BDSM world. Those kinds of stories can certainly be exciting, but this collection is about people who have a view based on experience and insight gained over some period of time. Some of the couples have been together for a very long time, while others are new to each other. Some couples have two experienced members, while some have only one. In every story, though, there is the sense that someone knowledgeable is present. For readers who have been "in the lifestyle" for more than a little while, there is something both enticing and comforting about that. The same is true for those of us who are no longer 20-somethings or even 30-somethings. In Lisabet Sarai's "Like Riding a Bicycle", we can identify with the putting-aside of personal pleasures for the more mundane and traditional business of life. Yet we also see how the way someone sits or the tone of someone's voice can bring the past rushing back in ways you'd never have expected to create new desires. Deborah Castellano's "Tails" will leave you off-balance and re-reading at first, as a game of heads or tails get flipped on its....head? "Teppanyaki" by Janine Ashbless presents a feast for all the senses as two couples gather to dine and leaves you hungry for more.
